Weather vs Climate

Weather - the atmospheric conditions of an area over a short period of time.

Climate - the long-term averages of weather in a particular area/region over a period of time.

Climate change is natural but current climate change is different.

Green house gases & Green house effect

MEASURES THAT CAN BE TAKEN FOR REDUCING CLIMATE CHANGE:

- To set up a local climate monitoring system involving teachers and students and create system to monitor weather bulletins and disseminate further to the local population.
- To take steps to create and in depth understanding of the term climate change and its impacts among the people
- To identify progressive farmers, interested students and teachers, self-help group members so that a working group can be formed for climate change action and train these members with the support of department of agriculture, agriculture universities, department of disaster managements etc.

Concept Note:

Climate is one of the assets for us that make the planet earth different from other heavenly bodies. But, due to certain anthropogenic and natural factors, drastic climate change across the globe has been witnessed over the years. To study the factors behind climate change, research activities didn't really pick up at the desired level until the 1980's. However, an influx of data emanated from different advancing technologies and scientific studies in recent times as well as the growing concerns for devastating impacts of climate change across disciplines and nations have really demanded timely attention from all segments of society. These days, threadbare discussions are going on concerning humanity's prominent role in major environmental and climatic changes and their various practices ranging from production to consumption. To address these, climate change has become an issue in recent years that needs to be deliberated within the contextual framework of Pure Sciences, Social Sciences, and Humanities as well.

Interdisciplinary and collaborative research in Pure Sciences, Social Sciences, and Humanities can contribute immensely to realize the potential threats of climate change. It is worth mentioning here that policymakers have also widely acknowledged the relevance and potential benefits of scientific collaboration across diverse disciplines. In other words, Social Sciences and Humanities along with Pure Sciences have laid immense stress these days to go deeper into the context of climate change through application of their disciplinary frameworks and subsequently have paved the way for a common platform for deliberation. In addition, policymakers are aware of the necessity, especially of the social scientists to contribute to climate change research besides scientists and environmentalists. After all, there is a widely acknowledged need for local, regional, and interdisciplinary approaches for altering the effects of climate change which was initially conceived as a purely physical and biogeochemical research sphere.

Along with other countries in the globe, India is also susceptible to wide scale climate change related risks due to erosion and degradation of diverse climate zones, topography, and ecosystems. The Global Climate Risk Index 2021 calls India the 7th most affected nation due to climate change. Available data suggests that India reported 280 heat waves between the period March 10-May 18, 2022 and it has been acknowledged as the highest in the last 12 years. Like the other parts of India,

The North-Eastern region has also seen adverse climatic conditions such as devastating flood, drought, landslide etc. In the wake of these conditions and rampant anthropogenic actions for blatant persuasion of development works with total disregard to nature and natural resources has aggravated the situation in the North-Eastern region of India, resulting in the loss of the much-needed balance between nature and beings. This growing imbalance and disharmony in the North-Eastern region of the nation has also led to alteration of weather pattern and rise in surface temperature besides impacting agriculture, livelihood and diverse cropping practices. Henceforth, the dire need of time is to formulate proper strategies with community involvement and effective implementation for curbing the negative impacts of climate change. Against this backdrop, the national seminar would endeavor to identify the problems of climate change and its impact especially in the North-East India and to understand the recent trends and patterns of climate strategies, adaptation, policies and research across disciplines.

SUB-THEMES

1. Climate change and its impact on culture, livelihood and lifestyle in North-East India
2. Climate change and disaster management
3. Global, national and regional literature on climate change
4. Climate change, education and indigenous knowledge system in North-East India

Conference Organizing Committee
Kamargaon College

About the College:

Kamargaon College was established in 1972 and falls under the Tribal Sub-Plan of Golaghat District. It is situated at Kamargaon under the Bokakhat Sub-Division of Golaghat District, Assam, and is located at a distance of 400 meters from the National Highway 715 (Erstwhile NH 37). It is a distinct institute of higher education in the greater Kamargaon locality which covers almost 35 villages. Since the inception, the college has served immensely in re-shaping and transforming this socio-economically disadvantaged society through dissemination of quality education. The college is affiliated to Dibrugarh University, Dibrugarh, Assam, India, and is included in the list of the institutions under section 2(f) and 12(b) of the UGC Act. In 2019, NAAC accredited the college in the third cycle with the grade B+

About Birangana Sati Sadhani Rajyik Vishwavidyalaya (BSSRV):

Birangana Sati Sadhani Rajyik Vishwavidyalaya (BSSRV) has been established by the Government of Assam under the Birangana Sati Sadhani Rajyik Vishwavidyalaya Act 2020. Prof. Jyoti Prasad Saikia has been appointed as the first Vice Chancellor of the university. The university has been allotted land in Rangajan under Morongi Revenue Circle of Golaghat District. Presently, the office of the Vice Chancellor is being run from Golaghat Engineering College premises. The mission and vision of the university are to develop global citizens through a holistic learning process, and endeavouring to turn it into a hub of multidisciplinary research and academic excellence for all its stakeholders. The mandate of the university is to fulfil the aspirations of a vast demography, comprising of students to run doctoral research, post-graduate courses and certificate/diploma courses. In offering these courses, the university aims at promulgating the policies enshrined in the National Education Policy (NEP) 2020. The university aims to equip learners with various skills and to make them competent and comfortable in their respective fields.

About The Assam Kaziranga University:

Founded in 2012, The Assam Kaziranga University, well known as KU, is one of the largest private universities in the North-East India. The Assam Kaziranga University has been established under the Assam Private University Act No. XII of 2007, offering state-of-the-art education and research relevant to market needs. The University has been promoted by the Trust under the banner of The North Eastern Knowledge Foundation (NEKF) and founded in the year 2012 by the Khetan Industrial Group. The social sensitivity and responsible entrepreneurship of both the groups have helped them to imbibe a culture of proeducation in their endeavour and give back the knowledge and experience to the society that they have gathered over years of service to the nation.

Concept Note:

South Asia refers to a group of nation states bounded by a geographical commonality or contiguity and is connected through historical, cultural, linguistic, ethnic, and civilizational linkages. It also refers to an institutionalised form of mechanism of regional co-operation. Constituted of the nations including India, Bangladesh, Nepal, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, Bhutan, Maldives, and Afghanistan, the region is presently home to over 1.9 billion people and is one of the most-heavily populated regions in the globe. Interestingly, the region boasts of a large number of young population and, as estimates have suggested, more than 35% population in South Asia comes under the age of 18. The region can cash in this demographic dividend for all-round development and acceleration of sustainable economic activities. However, it needs to be kept in mind that the region has remained one of the poorest in the world, with more than 30% of the population, as the World Bank suggests, still living under the international poverty line. To cash in the demographic dividend at its fullest and bridge the gaps, higher education in these nations can play a big role and create multifarious opportunities.

In the region, countries are largely agricultural economies, and approximately 70% of the total population live in rural areas. However, the nations are forging a path towards the direction of the growth of their industry and services sectors. The region is also vulnerable to natural disasters and has witnessed in the recent times various sorts of political instabilities, internal conflicts, and security concerns. All the nations of the region fall under developing and least-developed countries and have confronted several challenges in areas such as education, infrastructure, and health. Compared to global averages, the region is lagging behind education output and has not been able to meet the demands of time owing to the particular challenges associated with the production of skilled workforce. Against this backdrop, the role of the higher education has proved critical in facilitating a skilled, competitive, and knowledgeable workforce for growth, investment, and development of all sorts.

In fact, demand for higher education in the nations of the region is on the rise, and it has increasingly brought forth the necessity for relevant policy interventions from concerned authorities as well as quality assurance mechanism. South Asian universities have constantly ranked poor on global rankings and are marred in numerous shortcomings. Poor employability of the graduates and the worrying disconnect between market requirement and curriculum along with bureaucratic hurdles, low female representation, and political interventions have plagued the higher education sector in these nations. Therefore, higher education has emerged as an area of priority in South Asia in the current century and has invited a great urgency of institutional reform and re-evaluation. The two-day conference seeks to address the changing dynamics of higher education in the South Asian nations against the stated backdrop and endeavours to unearth the various dimensions by providing a necessary platform to the academicians, researchers, students and media persons as well for fruitful deliberation.

Methodology of the Study

① The study involves two general data sources and is organized along the dimensions below of the number "General Data Source in 2011 and 2012 and the data is organized by a statistical and mathematical approach."

② Data Model for the logistic regression

$$\ln \left(\frac{P_{ij}}{1 - P_{ij}} \right) = \beta_0 + \beta_1 x_1 + \beta_2 x_2 + \beta_3 x_3 + \dots + \beta_k x_k$$

③ Effect on regression coefficient variables: In the regression model for dependent variables, and to determine the true variables that the independent variables in the regression, the probability of each the probability given the scores on the independent variables.

④ Logistic's alpha measure the reliability of the data. The value of 0.70 is a higher test.

Issues and challenges

- Poor infrastructure is another challenge in higher education of Nepal
- Unregulated expansion of affiliated colleges, TE has 1000 affiliated colleges (private and community) which are not regularly monitored and regulated, still, there are some capacity to regulate and monitor by the standard norms and rules.
- Political interference and politics intervention: The government appoints university officials, they provide support to a party and do not focus on all student expectations affiliated to different political parties also various academic and administrative activities. Universities and colleges also lack sufficient autonomy to make their own decisions regarding their development.
- Faculty crisis and biased system is main challenge.
